

Are you in compliance with AHERA?

Some school administrators and boards are not even aware of AHERA, even though it governs one of the greatest liabilities that exists on many school campuses.

In 1986 Congress passed the Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act (AHERA) which requires all public and private schools (K-12) to be inspected for building materials containing asbestos.

These regulations also require reinspection of your facility by a properly trained and licensed person every three years, along with several other forms of documentation and notifications of your community.

Building Solutions has been assisting our school clients with AHERA compliance for over two decades, saving them hundreds of thousands of dollars in potential fines and penalties.

If you'd like a review of your AHERA records, free of charge, to determine if you appear to be in compliance, give us a call or reply to this email. Even if you don't know where to begin in trying to achieve compliance, let us know.

If it's time for your reinspection, we'll be happy to help with that as well.

Thank you for considering Building Solutions for your facility needs.
